Ed Guttenplan co-founded WilkinGuttenplan in 1983 and was the firm's former managing shareholder from 1983 through 2023. In addition to his administrative duties in managing the strategy, personnel, and financial aspects of the practice, Ed provides a wide array of accounting, tax, and business advisory services to closely held and family-owned businesses in the construction, food service, manufacturing, technology, legal, engineering, as well as nonprofit organizations and condo and homeowner associations.

Ed's real estate practice includes numerous real estate developers. His services include the development of budgets and forecasts, consultation regarding condominiums, cooperative corporations, and homeowner association management, and guidance on accounting and tax matters relating to project development and litigation support services. Ed also services many community associations, including active adult communities, cooperatives, mixed-use, and multi-association communities.

Prior to co-founding WilkinGuttenplan, Ed worked in private industry for both regional and international accounting firms.

Ed is very active in and committed to community service.
