Ed Wilkin co-founded WilkinGuttenplan in 1983. He has over 40 years of experience helping family-owned and closely held businesses manage the challenges in today's business environment. His clients cover a variety of industries, including retail, wholesaling, real estate, construction, distribution, manufacturing, consulting, health care services, law firms, and other professional practices. Ed has assisted clients with their audit and accounting requirements, securing financing, mergers and acquisitions, planning and implementing business and tax strategies. He prides himself on always being available for his clients when they need help.

As part of his extensive real estate practice, Ed serves various clients in the real estate industry, including commercial, residential, office and medical property developers, owners/investors, managers, and brokers. He works with a diverse assortment of properties, including residential homes, apartment buildings, condominiums, cooperative corporations and townhome communities, low-income housing, including issues related to government regulations (HUD, low-income housing credits), golf course communities, shopping centers, parking facilities, offices, and commercial buildings.

Ed's expertise in litigation support includes expert witness testimony. He has produced reports and served as an expert in many areas, including shareholder disputes, fraud and embezzlement losses, professional malpractice, probate matters, contractual disputes, lost revenue and profits, and valuations.

Prior to co-founding WilkinGuttenplan, Ed was a partner with a regional CPA firm.
